BILL AIMED TO DEVELOP MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

Creation of Department of Commerc Will Be One of the First Tasks of the New Session.

REFUBLIC SPECIAL

Washington, Nov. 16 .- The bill for the cre ation of a Department of Commerce is to

There is a diversity of views in regard to the bureaus and divisions that should be divorced from the departments of which they now form a part and transferred to the proposed Department of Commerce. Most of the divisions which the bill proposes to constitute into a new department are taken from the departments of the Treasury and the Interior, in each of which there are a number of divisions which have no logical connection with either.

There has come a strong opposition from those interested in the several divisions proposed to be transferred, with the result that the progress of the bill has been obstructed in the House. Some time ago, it was suggested to the President that the existing differences as to the propriety of transferring some of the divisions included in the bill might be reconciled by the detail of a competent person from each of them to meet with the House Committee on Commerce, and, if possible, make selections of the bureaus and divisions that should properly constitute the new department.

should properly constitute the new department.

Chairman Hepburn is here to take up the matter with those who may be detailed from the departments, but it seems that some have been thus far detailed. On the return of the President the matter will be called to his attention, but it is hoped that something will be done before the Christmas holidays, which will enable the committee to act on the Senate bill.

The bill provides for establishing a bureau of manufactures, which is to have charge of the manufacturing interests of the United States, to gather, compile and publish information in relation to obtaining markets abroad for products and to assist

BIG KNOX COUNTY GUSHER. Interstate Petroleum Company Makes a Rich Strike.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Louisville, Nov. 16.—A hundred-barrel well was the greatest strike of the week in the Kentucky oil fields. This came in Knox County, where the activity is greatest, though the Ragland field is a close second in the matter of development.

The gusher of the week is known as the Interestate Petroleum Company's Miller well No. 2 14 came in in the Jones sand November 11. The oil gushed several times to the height of thirty feet, and the gas pressure is heavy. Before tanks could be erected several hundred barrels of oil were wasted. The well has served to stimulate operations in that section. Another well is drilling on the Miller farm. The No. 1 well on this farm is a small producer. The No. 2 well is 359 feet down. The Richland Oil Company brought in a fifth well on the Hammons farm, at the head of Richland Creek, at 385 feet. There is not a dry hole on the Hammons farm.

Hammons farm, at the head of Richland Creek, at 385 feet. There is not a dry hole on the Hammons farm.

Among the Knox County wells now going down, and their depth, are the following: Miller No. 2, of the Atlantic and Pacific; Anderson's Rynder No. 1, 200 feet; Hoblitzell's Anderson No. 1, 235 feet; Richland Oil Company's Hammons No. 7, 200 feet; Interstate Petroleum Company's Hemson No. 1, 200 feet; Knox Labricating Company's Goehen No. 1; Hoblitzell's Caudill No. 1, 150 feet; Pioneer Oil Company's No. 1, 700 feet; Atlantic and Pacific Company's Ribson No. 4, 300 feet, There are several others drilling high up on Richland Creek.

The demand for drillers in Knox County cannot be supplied. Barbourville is crowded with speculators, operators and others. The demand for houses far exceeds the supply. It is, estimated that the town has almost doubled in population since the oil development was begun, two years ago. There are five hotels, none of them large, but all are always filled to their capacity. In fact, it is almost difficult for new arrivals to obtain accommodations. Among the important transactions during the week in Barbourville was the purchase by Vincent Boreing, Congressman from the Eleventh Kentucky District, of 100 acres on Richland Creek, adjoining the Miller farm. J. J. Hoblitzell has leased the Mayhew lands, south of Barbourville, paying therefor 35,500, and giving the owner one-eighth of the oil.

OTHER MATTERS SUBORDINATE. ADMITS TAKING TWO TOWELS.

Reported That the Recommendation Will Be Made That the United Mine Workers Shall Incorporate.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 16.-The recognition of the miners' union is the chief question before the Strike Commissioners. There is no doubt of that. Despite the operators' emphatic assertions in their replies to President Mitchell's statement that they would not be considered as parties to any discussion or plan for recognition of the union, it is the keynote of their cross-examination. as it was of Mitchell's address to the commission, and has been of his testimony. Questions of wages, rate of pay, weighing of coal, child labor, are all subordinate to the great question of whether the operators and the elected officials of the union shall meet each year and make an agreement regarding the conditions of work and the rate of pay.

So far as it goes, there is even talk here that the arbitrators fear a serious division of sentiment on the board regarding the question, and that, if they do not recom-mend recognition, there will be another The latter rumor is unfounded, and nel-ther the operators nor the mine workers believe in the possibility of another strike, at least for some time.

That it will come eventually, despite the finding of the commission, there is no doubt among the operators, and one of the most prominent of the mine workers, who has been a student of conditions for many years eave:

been a student of conditions for many years, says:

"There is sure to be a bigger strike than this one in five years from now, whatever is the award of the commission."

It is stated to-night that the commission is considering the advisability of recommending that the operators recognize the union in the event of the union being incorporated, and in their finding to suggest the incorporation. No member of the commission would discuss the matter to-night, but Mr. Mitchell was seen. He said that he did not know that any member of the commission had expressed any opinion in the matter.

"Would you favor incorporation of the union if the Commissioners recommended it with a view to obtaining recognition of the urion?" he was asked.

He shook his head. "I cannot answer that because I do not know what the commission will do," he said.

That the operators realize that the consideration of this vital question will be the chief one before the commission is evident from the wealth of detail in their crossexamination in relation to the nosition of the union in the districts where the agreements exist and their efforts to show that, while the mine workers do get better wages, they are not really as well off as in this region; that the companies cannot engage and discharge whom they desire; that the quality of the coal mined is deteriorating and there are constant complaints from the customers, while the freedom of the coal trade is greatly restricted.

The men were not acquainted. Norton says he had no idea of killing Moss when he struck. He simply resented an insult. Norton was brought to this city and placed in fall to await the action of the Grand Jury at the next term of court.
